HISTORICAL NOTES

Linden is named after the Linden Mine near Menzies, Broken Hill, NSW. The original house built in the 1880s no longer exists, however the 1909 homestead is typical of the period. The property also contains a number of outbuildings and an irrigation system on Nannup Brook which was designed by the original owner R. Lindsay and which is still in use today.

DESCRIPTION

The original Linden homestead was constructed of jarrah slabs. This building no longer exists however the jarrah slabs form part of the floor of the existing shearing shed. The current homestead was constructed in 1909 of local bricks made on the property. The homestead was extended in 1915 in weatherboard and iron with elaborate pressed metal wall and ceiling linings. The homestead remains substantially as originally constructed and is occupied.
